Hannah Butler is a recovering perfectionist who grew up in a culturally Catholic, blended family of 9 kids in southern California. In high school she began like all teenagers, asking big questions and - by the grace of God - turning to the Church for answers. Thanks to her parish youth group she attended a Steubenville conference, where she had her first experience of Eucharistic adoration. Mystified and intrigued, she sought more reading and reasoning her way deeper into Catholicism. Upon learning that a university had hosted that life-changing weekend, she visited the Franciscan University of Steubenville. Despite graduating as valedictorian of her high school with plans to become a Navy doctor, she decided to apply only to Franciscan and drop her premed major and ended up studying theology and Spanish.

Through various ups and downs, considering a religious calling, doing foreign missionary work, she found herself developing both a prayer life and solid friendships rooted in Christ.

She eventually returned to California where she met her husband Patrick. They currently live in Escondido with their two children.

Hannah gives doctrinal, spiritual and human formation in the spirit of Opus Dei to women and girls in San Diego county and helps lead the Mom's Group at her parish. In all of this, she strives to be a witness to our Father God's loving presence, as she cooperates with the Holy Spirit to make heroic verse out of the prose of everyday life.
